ASCAP MUSIC IS GOOD FOR BUSINESS

In 1953, music will be used in more pictures, will entertain more people, and will mean more money at the box office.

The use of music by entertainment enterprises of all kinds is increasing rapidly. This year, like last, more showmen will discover more ways in which ASCAP music can help them make greater profits.

ASCAP's simple licensing system puts the country's 2,500 songwriters and composers to work for business—inexpensively, promptly, efficiently. ASCAP's local offices are on the job to serve users of music—new clients as well as old customers—from Maine to California.

An ASCAP license is the most direct avenue to greater profits.

United Paramount Theatres, Inc., reported net earnings of $6,961,113, of which $1,347,487 was net capital gains for the year ended January 3, 1953. This compared with earnings of $10,705,011, including capital gains of $4,002,590 for the previous year. The company attributed the decline is net mostly to increased film rentals even though consolidated theatre receipts were practically equal to those of the previous year.

Earnings for 1952 amounted to $1.70 per share from operations and 41 cents per share from capital gains for a total of $2.11 per share on 3,300,822 shares outstanding as compared with 1951 earnings of $2.03 per share from operations and $1.21 per share from capital gains for a total of $3.24 per share on 3,300,859 shares outstanding. Dividends paid during the year amounted to $4,126,747 on the basis of $1.25 per share. The quarterly dividend rate was reduced to 25 cents per share in the second quarter of the year. The consolidated profit and loss further showed theatre receipts and rentals for 1952 of $115,626,502 compared to $115,746,552 for 1951. Expenses for 1952 were $102,972,448 compared to $100,599,628 for 1951.

As of January 1, 1953, the company, through operating subsidiaries, had 651 wholly-owned theatres and 57 partly owned theatres. To complete the reorganization required by the Consent Judgment of March 3, 1949, the company still had, at the year-end, to divest itself of 43 wholly-owned theatres, and terminate joint interests in 43 partly owned theatres, of which 5 may be retained as wholly-owned theatres. Under the terms of the Consent Judgment the company is permitted to retain 651 theatres either wholly-owned or jointly with investors.

The merger of United Paramount Theatres, Inc. and American Broadcasting Company, Inc., was consummated on February 9, 1953, upon approval by the Federal Communications Commission. The resulting company is now known as American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, Inc.

The pro forma balance sheet of the merged company shows cash and government securities of $32,573,000, working capital of $27,644,000 and total assets of $141,101,000, including intangibles of $8,757,000. Long term debt amounts to $42,881,000. These figures give effect to the retirement of $7,662,000 of ABC's term debt on February 13, 1953, as well as the proceeds from the sale of television station WBKB in Chicago for $6,000,000.

American Broadcasting Company, a self contained division within the merged company, owns and operates the following radio and TV stations: New York—WABC, WABC-FM, WABC-TV; Chicago—WENR, WENR-FM, WENR-TV; Detroit—WXYZ, WXYZ-FM, WXYZ-TV; Los Angeles—KECA, KECA-FM, KECA-TV; San Francisco—KGO, KGO-FM, KGO-TV.

It also has 362 affiliated radio stations and 95 affiliated TV stations.

American Broadcasting Company reported a net loss for the year ended December 31, 1952, of $141,725 on a gross income from operations of $56,803,508.

HISTORY OF COLUMBIA PICTURES

Columbia Pictures Corp. was incorporated January 10, 1924. The company's origin traces back to Harry Cohn, who was an independent producer making shorts. Jack Cohn resigned from Universal to go into the motion picture business for himself. The firm of Jack and Harry Cohn was then organized. Later Jack and Harry Cohn prevailed upon Joseph Brandt, who had been the General Manager of Universal to join them. The name of the company was changed to CBC Sales Corporation. Later it was changed to Columbia.

Net profit for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1952, was $803,000, compared to $1,498,000 for the previous year. Earnings per share of common stock were 80 cents as against $1.81 in the prior year. Comparative earnings per share of common after preferred stock dividends are calculated on the increased amount of common outstanding June 30, 1952. The number of shares outstanding on that date was 670,669, the number outstanding the previous year was 654,311. Operating profit for the previous year was $2,668,000 compared to the current operating profit of $1,563,000. Estimated provision for Federal taxes in the respective years was $1,170,000 and $760,000.

Gross income from film rentals was $55,368,284 in the year ending June 30, 1951, as compared with $57,230,787 in the year ending June 30, 1950. Income and profit for the last four fiscal years follow:

Year	Gross Income	Profit
1948..........	$46,898,785	$565,221
1949..........	53,333,764	1,007,514
1950..........	57,230,787	1,981,488
1951..........	55,368,284	1,497,814
1952..........	59,081,213	803,000

HISTORY OF LOEW'S INCORPORATED

Loew's, Inc. takes its name from its founder, the late Marcus Loew, a pioneer in the nickelodeon and arcade era of the movies. Among his early associates were Adolph Zukor and the brothers Joseph M. and Nicholas M. Schenck, the latter now president of the company. For a number of years the organization was active exclusively in film exhibition, chiefly in theatres with a mixed picture and vaudeville policy. In 1910, after several years of expansion, Marcus Loew organized Loew's Consolidated Enterprises. The next year this was succeeded by Loew's Theatrical Enterprises, extending the scope of theatre operations from New York into other cities.

By 1919, Loew's had partial or entire control of 56 theatres. Loew's, Inc., was organized in October, 1919, and acquired the stock of Loew's Theatrical Enterprises. Continuing a policy of gradual expansion of theatre interests, business had reached a point where Marcus Loew, Nicholas M. Schenck and other executives were looking about for a way of uniting their theatre interests to an active production organization. This problem was met in 1920 with the acquisition of the stock of Metro

Pictures Corporation, which later turned out such films as "The Prisoner of Zenda," "Scaramouche," and "The Four Horsemen."

The move to fortify the playing schedules of the Loew Theatres with an annual production output proved sound, and further expansion was in order. In 1924, Marcus Loew and his associates made successful overtures for the interests in the Goldwyn Company, which had been started in 1917, and Loew's became the owner of the merged Metro-Goldwyn stock. Shortly afterwards producing assets of Louis B. Mayer Pictures, including the services of Mayer, Irving Thalberg and J. Robert Rubin were acquired by the company and the production organization controlled by Loew's took the name Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Important executive posts in the new production organization were held by Louis B. Mayer, the late Irving Thalberg and J. Robert Rubin, who became vice-president in charge of the Eastern offices. Howard Dietz, now vice-president of Loew's in charge of publicty, and advertising, originated the Leo the Lion trademark, which the company has largely exploited.

In December, 1937, to simplify the corporate structure, legal control of the entire production and distribution organization was vested in Loew's, Inc., with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer being used merely as a trade name.

In the spring of 1949, the silver anniversary of M-G-M productions was celebrated. Among notable pictures in company history have been "The Big Parade," "Ben Hur," "Grand Hotel," "Dinner at Eight," "The Thin Man," "David Copperfield," "A Tale of Two Cities," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Captains Courageous," "Goodbye Mr. Chips," "Mrs. Miniver," "Gone With the Wind," produced by David O. Selznick, released by M-G-M., "Madame Curie," "The Yearling," "Battleground," King Solomon's Mines," "Quo Vadis" and many others.

Loew's, Inc., which passed its thirty-second anniversary in the fall of 1951, is doing an annual gross business of $176,000,000, with company stock, based on current market quotations, valued in excess of $92,000,000. There are 140 Loew theatres in the United States and Canada, and other countries throughout the world. The company's subsidiary, called Loew's International Corporation, which carries on all foreign operations, is under the supervision of Arthur M. Loew, son of Marcus Loew.

Among the Loew executives who have been with the company twenty-six years or more are Leopold Friedman, vice-president and secretary of Loew's and head of the legal department, with a record of thirty-seven years service; C. C. Moskowitz, vice-president and treasurer of Loew's, with the firm thirty-nine years; Joseph R. Vogel, vice-president in charge of theatre operations with the organization thirty-eight years; and William F. Rodgers, distribution vice-president, a company executive for more than twenty-seven years.

Loew's, Inc., has produced from forty to fifty feature pictures annually and turns out an average of fifty short subjects each season, in addition to the distribution of the newsreel, "News of the Day."

Mr. Mayer resigned his post on August 31, 1951 and was succeeded by Dore Schary as vice-president in charge of production and studio operations. Subsequently, Mr. Mayer reached a financial settlement with the company in lieu of his profit-sharing arrangement and continuing equities in released and unreleased pictures and thus completely severed his many years of association with the company.

On February 6, 1952, the consent decree against Loew's, Inc. was signed in New York. It provided for a divorce between the producing and distributing phases of the corporation and its exhibition activities and interests.

Outright divestiture of 24 theatres in two years and conditional divestiture of almost another 50 theatres were provided for. The decree also contained a new divorcement approach, made necessary by Loew's present outstanding indebtedness, which Justice Department officials put at about $40,000,000. Under this provision, a new theatre company would have to be set up within two years and be operated independently of Loew's from then on, but Loew's could continue to hold the stock of this new theatre company if it could prove to the court's satisfaction that it could not refinance so as to divide the present debt between itself and the new theatre company.

In that case, the theatre company stock could be retained by Loew's until suitable refinancing was arranged. The divorcement would have to be complete in any event within five years from now. From the time the new theatre company was set up until its capital stock was distributed to Loew's stockholders, half of its board would be controlled by the New York statutory court to insure independent operation.

Trade practice and other provisions of the Loew's decree generally followed those of the earlier decrees. The reorganization plan must transfer all Loew's theatre assets to a new company, and in return Loew's will get all of the capital stock of the new theatre company.

The decree provided that so long as Loew's retains the stock of the new theatre company it can receive money from the theatre company either to pay off the funded debt or to pay dividends to Loew's stockholders. The by-laws of the theatre company must state that until its capital stock is distributed to Loew's stockholders, in order to make sure it is operated independently of Loew's, one-half of its board of directors shall be approved by the New York court "and be subject to its direction."

From the consummation of the reorganization plan on, the decree states, Loew's and the new theatre company must be operated completely independently and have no common directors, officers, agents or employes. Within six months from the time the theatre company stock is distributed to Loew's stockholders, all officers, directors and agents of Loew's or any employe who owns one-half of one per cent or more of the Loew's common stock must, if they are to continue with Loew's, either sell or deposit with a court-appointed trustee all stock in the new theatre company.

The trustee shall vote the stock, and sell it if it is not disposed of by its owner within one year from the time it is deposited with the trustee. The owner of the stock can get the dividends, however, while it is trusteed. The same arrangement is prescribed for officers, directors or agents or large stockholders of the new theatre company, with respect to stock in Loew's.

If Loew's asks more time to carry out better refinancing, and if the court grants it, "then, after two years from the date of transfer of the assets to the new theatre company, no officer or director of the theatre company or of Loew's shall receive, directly or indirectly, any dividends on any share of Loew's stock in excess of the amount of earnings per share of the company in which any such person is an officer or director."

The decree provided that no officer or director or agent or employe of Loew's shall have any interest in the profits of the new theatre company or in the business of film exhibition, and lays down a similar ban against interest in production or distribution for the like theatre company officials and employes.

The theatre company by-laws must provide that no one affiliated with any other circuit can become an officer or director unless approved by the Justice Department and the court, and that in no event can an officer or director be affiliated with any other circuit which was a defendant in a government anti-trust suit. Loew's by-laws must provide that no one who is a director, agent, officer, employe or substantial stockholder of another distributor can be an officer or director.

Loew's is banned from exhibition and the theatre company is banned from distribution, except on application to and approval of the court and on a showing that such action will not unreasonably restrain competition. Until divorcement or divestiture is completed, Loew's could acquire new theatres to replace those destroyed or converted to non-theatrical purposes or to replace theatres on which leases cannot be renewed. In the latter case, the court must approve. All other acquisition is banned. After the divorcement and divestiture provisions are carried out, theatres could be obtained only to replace those destroyed or converted, and only with court approval.

A ten-year chart reflecting profit and loss follows. In each case the year ended on August 31:

Year
1943	$26,172,000
1944	18,666,000

HISTORY OF MONOGRAM PICTURES

Monogram Pictures Corporation evolved in 1930, under the leadership of W. Ray Johnston, its president, who formed the company with a group of independent exchange men who were distributors for its predecessor, Rayart Productions, founded by Mr. Johnston in 1924. The exchange owners who distributed Rayart product had previously formed a co-operative organization merging distribution units. This nucleus was incorporated as Monogram with Mr. Johnston as president. Trem Carr headed production, and Edward A. Golden joined the organization as sales manager.

In the first year of operation the company produced 28 features. Two years later it entered the worldwide market with Pathe as British distributor, and Empire Films, Ltd., as Canadian outlet. The United States and Canada was served through 37 affiliated exchanges. For 1932-33 the company produced 32 pictures, and in the next year increased its production budget one third. Mr. Johnston marked his 29th anniversary in the business in 1952.

During the autumn of 1935, Mr. Johnston, Trem Carr and Herbert Yates formed Republic Pictures, incorporating the Monogram exchanges as distribution outlets. A year later Mr. Johnston and Mr. Carr withdrew from Republic and revived Monogram, creating a new system of franchise distribution.

In succeeding years the company gradually heightened the quality of its productions, with Mr. Johnston again as president and Trem Carr as executive director in charge of production. Number of annual feature releases has been maintained at between 40 and 50. Among the important films have been "Dillinger," "Lady, Let's Dance," "Women in Bondage" and "The Unknown Guest"; and in 1946 the company released its first million dollar picture, "Suspense."

In November, 1945, Steve Broidy, formerly general sales manager, was elected president of Monogram, with Mr. Johnston becoming chairman of the board. Issue of 100,000 shares of 5½% convertible preferred, voted in January, 1945, has since been redeemed, and the authorized capitalization of the company is now represented by 1,000,000 shares of common stock, par value $1.

Monogram franchise holders currently include: Arthur C. Bromberg, Atlanta, Charlotte, Memphis, New Orleans; Harry Berkson, Albany, Buffalo; Herman Rifkin, Boston, New Haven; Ben Williams, Pittsburgh; Irving Mandel, Chicago, Indianapolis; Nate Schultz, Cleveland; William Hurlburt, Detroit; Howard Stubbins, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Portland; Geo. West, Cincinnati. The company operates its own branches in New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Omaha, Des Moines, Minneapolis, Oklahoma City, Dallas, St. Louis, Salt Lake City, Denver and Kansas City.

In November, 1946, Allied Artists Productions, Inc., was formed as a wholly-owned subsidiary of Monogram Pictures Corporation, to handle production of high-budget pictures exclusively. Physical distribution of the Allied Artists films is handled by the existing Monogram exchanges, but otherwise the new company is treated as a separate entity.

Stratford Pictures Corp. organized August, 1949, with Steve Broidy, president, and George D. Burrows vice-president, distributes foreign language films in this country, using Monogram exchanges.

In 1951, the company engaged in the production of films for TV and for that purpose organized the Interstate Television Corporation.

The net profit for the fiscal year ended June 28, 1952, was $589,259, which compares with $1,061,648 for the preceding year. The profit is equal to $.76 a share.

DATE AND PLACE OF INCORPORATION
Incorporated under the laws of New York State, July 19, 1916; new company, November 15, 1949.

HISTORY OF PARAMOUNT

Paramount Pictures Corp., currently in production, as well as in distribution, may be said to have taken most of its origins from the activities of Adolph Zukor, who entered the amusement field in the dawn years with a penny arcade, with Hale's Tours, a motion picture exhibition device, and with nickelodeon theatres, including an early association with the late Marcus Loew in those undertakings. Mr. Zukor in 1912 formed the Engadine Corporation, to distribute an imported picture, which evolved into his Famous Players Film Company, which was to make famous plays with famous players in them. W. W. Hodkinson, emerging from General Film Company, the "trust" of the day, in 1914 formed Paramount Pictures Corporation, which took over distribution of the Zukor product and along with it the product of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company and others. This led to a course of mergers, with Mr. Zukor dominant.

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation was incorporated on July 19, 1916. In 1917 twelve producing companies merged with it. At the same time the corporation integrated production and distribution by acquiring a national distribution system through a merger with Artcraft Pictures Corporation and Paramount Pictures Corporation.

In 1919 the corporation started its theatre acquisition program. It acquired stock interest in Southern Enterprises, Inc., with 135 theatres in the South; in 1920 it acquired stock interest in New England Theatres, Inc., with 50 New England theatres; in the Butterfield Theatre Circuit with 70 theatres in Michigan about 1926; in Balaban & Katz with 50 theatres in Illinois at the same time. Later numerous theatres in the West and Middle West were acquired.

Paramount's first great star was Mary Pickford, around whom Mr. Zukor built his Famous Players. The roster of the organization has included a preponderance of the great names of the screen. "The Covered Wagon," and "The Ten Commandments" are landmarks of Paramount tradition.

In April, 1927, the corporate name was changed to Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, and in April, 1930, to Paramount Publix Corporation. In 1933, Paramount Publix Corporation was adjudicated a bankrupt in the Federal District Court for the Southern District of New York. In June, 1935, it was reorganized under Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act under the name of Paramount Pictures, Inc.

Barney Balaban, president, arrived through the field of exhibition, starting on Chicago's West Side with a nickelodeon which developed into the Balaban & Katz circuit, dominant in the Chicago area.

Y. Frank Freeman, also a former exhibition executive, is the vice-president in charge of studio production. The Hollywood studios annually turn out a program of quality feature pictures. The company also produces and releases a program of one-reel and two-reel short subjects and 104 issues of Paramount News annually.

In December, 1949, as a result of the reorganization required by the Consent Decree in the action of the Government against the major companies, Paramount split into two companies—Paramount Pictures Corporation, for production-distribution, and United Paramount Theatres, Inc., for theatre operation. (See Theatre Circuits).

Paramount was the first motion picture company to recognize the potential importance of television, particularly from a theatre standpoint. In 1939 it formed a subsidiary, Paramount Television Productions, Inc., which operates Station KTLA in Hollywood. Paramount is interested in Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Inc., which owns and operates WABD in New York City.

Net profit for the fiscal year ended January 3, 1953 was $5,899,871, equivalent to $2.52 per share on the 2,339,479 shares outstanding. This compared with net profit of $5,459,273 and earnings of $2.33 per share the previous year. Total current assets amounted to $73,695,708 for the year compared to $72,339,700 for the year 1951. During 1952 the corporation acquired 2,600 shares of its common stock for retirement making a total of 3,200 shares now held by the treasury for retirement.

The profit for the years mentioned does not include $446,000 for 1952 and $43,000 for 1951 representing the company's share of undistributed earnings of nonconsolidated domestic and Canadian companies. Dividends received from the controlled companies included in this group were not materially different from the company's share of their earnings for these years.

HISTORY OF RKO PICTURES CORPORATION

RKO Pictures Corporation is the producing and distributing company organized on November 18, 1950 as a result of the separation of production and distribution from exhibition under the consent decree which terminated the Government's long-standing anti-trust litigation against Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation. The latter company is now dissolved, its exhibition arm now taking form in a new company, RKO-Keith Orpheum Theatres Inc. (corporate personnel in this section; theatre holdings in Theatre Circuits Section.)

The defunct parent company, with its variously affiliated and subsidiary interests, had the most complex ancestry in the industry. Its beginnings are as remote as a transaction by which John R. Freuler of Milwaukee, invested $900 with an ex-policeman in a nickelodeon in 1905, and include, too, heritages of the important vaudeville institutions of Benjamin F. Keith in Boston and the Martin Beck Orpheums. The Milwaukee nickelodeon led to the formation of the Western Film Exchange of Milwaukee, and its expansion to other cities, becoming the nucleus of the Mutual Film Corporation of Virginia and some nineteen subsidiaries in distribution and production, 1913-1918. Its first president was Harry E. Aitken, promoter of "The Birth of a Nation," and in sequel of Triangle Pictures Corporation, the organization launched on a policy of $2 a seat movies in 1915.

The highlight of Mutual was its starting of the big star salary wave through employment in 1916 of Charles Chaplin at a $670,000 salary for his work in twelve two-reel comedies to be made in a year. Through various transmutations, Mutual became Exhibitors Mutual Film Corporation, the Robertson-Cole concern and the Film Booking Offices of America, presently FBO, for a time under the ministrations of Patrick A. Powers, who had entered the film field with Universal Film Manufacturing Company, a contributing producer.

In 1927, Joseph P. Kennedy of Boston, and Guy C. Currier, Boston lawyer and capitalist, entered FBO. On January 28, 1928, the Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation was organized, bringing in various exhibition interests.

In October, 1928, with the Radio Corporation of America looking to its place in the development of the sound picture, Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation was formed taking over control of the K-A-O concern and Orpheum Circuit, Inc., and later various other exhibition interests, including R-K-O Proctor Corporation and R-K-O Midwest Corporation. FBO Productions, Inc., and studio subsidiary, the principal producing interests acquired in the alignments, was renamed R-K-O Radio Pictures. In January, 1931, it took over various elements of Pathe Exchange, Inc., including Pathe News, and production assets, including studios in California. Through Pathe with its prior operations of absorption, this added to the background of components such items as the relics of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation and Producers Distributing Corporation, thus adding to the antecedents the efforts of W. W. Hodkinson, founder of the Paramount distribution machine, after prior experience with the long defunct General Film Company, sales arm of the Motion Picture Patents Company.

On January 27, 1933, the R-K-O Corporation went into an equity receivership and subsequently reorganization proceedings, with the Irving Trust Company was appointed receiver and trustee. The receivership and reorganization did not include the principal subsidiaries such as R-K-O Radio Pictures, Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation and RKO-Pathe, Inc. (formerly Pathe News, Inc.).

A plan of reorganization was approved January 17, 1939, confirmed April 11, 1939, and affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit on September 8, 1939. The plan was consummated on January 27, 1940, when all the assets of the predecessor RKO company were transferred to the successor RKO company and the securities of the predecessor became exchangeable for securities of the successor in accordance with the terms of the plan.

In August, 1947, RKO sold Pathe News to Warner Brothers.

The predecessor company, until May, 1948, was controlled through stock ownership by Atlas Corporation (RCA having disposed of its interest in April of 1943), and the management was then headed by Floyd B. Odlum, as chairman of the board, N. Peter Rathvon, as president and in charge of production at the studio, and Ned E. Depinet, as executive vice-president and the chief executive in New York.

In May, 1948, Howard Hughes bought the controlling interest, 929,000 shares of common stock, owned by Atlas Corporation, although that company retained a number of option certificates.

In recent years considerable strides had been made in improving the quality of the picture product produced at the studio and in rehabilitation and integration of theatre operating properties, all of which were controlled by RKO Theatres, Inc. (formerly B. F. Keith Corporation). Early in 1946 substantially all the previously outstanding funded debt of all theatre operating subsidiaries was refunded with low interest rate debentures of RKO Theatres, Inc., and all the preferred stock of the then new parent company was redeemed or converted into common stock, leaving the parent company with a capitalization consisting entirely of common stock.

At a special meeting held March 28, 1949, the stockholders of RKO adopted a Plan of Reorganization which resulted in a separation of theatre exhibition from production and distribution through the formation of two new companies to which these separate assets were transferred. Stockholders of RKO received stocks of the two new companies in exchange for their RKO stock. The Plan of Reorganization was provided for in a consent decree entered into after extensive negotiations with the Department of Justice, which terminated the long Government anti-trust litigation against RKO. After the separation was completed RKO was dissolved.

Subsequently, Hughes contested action of the New York Statutory Court to compel him to sell his RKO Theatre stock and thus confine his interest to RKO production and distribution as provided in the decree. On February 3, 1952, the U. S. Supreme Court unanimously ruled the lower court was in error in ordering Hughes to dispose of his trusteed Theatre stock without his consent or without new hearings and findings of fact. The high court said it had no doubt the New York court could require the sale after a proper hearing, but ruled that this had not been held so far. The decision left the way open for a new Justice Department effort to force the sale of the stock, with a new motion to the Statutory Court, submission of evidence, hearings and new findings of fact by the lower court.

DATE OF ORGANIZATION
Nov. 18, 1950; Delaware.

CAPITALIZATION
8,000,000 shares at $1 per share; 3,914,913 shares outstanding.

In the first year of its operations, RKO Theatres Corporation, which came into existence by virtue of the consent decree which divorced RKO production and distribution from exhibition, earned a consolidated net profit of $1,322,000 after income taxes of $1,225,000. This net represented earnings of about 34 cents a share on the 3,914,913 shares of common stock outstanding. For 1952 the net was $1,025,900 (26 cents per share). Box office receipts during the year totaled $26,954,800, compared with $29,550,300 in 1951. The company reported it had complied with the provisions of the decree. RKO theatres now operates about 85 theatres of which about 40 per cent are located in the metropolitan New York area. Assets as of December 31, 1951 were $49,452,690.

HISTORY OF REPUBLIC PICTURES

Republic Pictures Corporation is the outgrowth of a development which started when its founder, H. J. Yates, one time member of the executive staff of the American Tobacco Company, entered the motion picture industry in 1915 with Hedwig Laboratories and launched Republic Laboratories in New York in 1918. That in turn was introductory to a procedure by which he took over the Eastman Kodak Company's motion picture laboratories, and acquired the Rothacker Laboratories in Chicago in 1924, crystalizing into the concern now known as Consolidated Film Industries.

Laboratory connections brought Mr. Yates into association with production and picture financing. In May, 1935, under his auspices four independent producing companies merged to form Republic Productions, Inc., producing unit, and subsequently, Republic Pictures Corporation, to distribute through franchise agreements. In the rented Mack Sennett studios in North Hollywood, the company first went to work.

Republic owns and operates its own branches in exchange centers throughout the United States, as well as in 17 foreign territories, the balance being operated under franchise agreement.

Distribution is under guidance of James R. Grainger.

In 1938, Republic bought the Mack Sennett studios and land adjoining, and embarked upon a construction program resulting in the erection of several large sound stages. After the war additional studio expansion was planned and much of it has already been effected.

In September, 1941, Republic Productions, Inc., was admitted to membership in the Association of Motion Picture Producers. Republic Pictures Corporation joined the Motion Picture Association in April of 1948.

In November of 1945, stockholders of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., voted the merger and consolidation of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., and Republic Pictures Corporation with Setay Company, Inc., the corporate name of which was changed to Republic Pictures Corporation. As of Oct. 27, 1951, the company's assets were $21,340,553.

For its fiscal year ended October 25, 1952, Republic and subsidiary companies earned a consolidated net income of $759,603, compared with $646,404 in the preceding fiscal year. Gross revenue was $33,085,510, compared with $33,409,612 in the previous fiscal year.

Stanley Warner Corporation is the new name of Warner Circuit Management Corporation, which was the theatre-owning arm of Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc. The latter was required by Consent Decree to dispose of its exhibition interests and early in 1953 the Fabian Enterprises bought the stock control of the theatre operation from Harry M., Albert and Jack Warner, who retained their interests in the picture company. The Fabian interests changed the name of Warner Circuit Management to Stanley Warner and continued it as a separate entity from their other theatre operations.

HISTORY OF TWENTIETH CENTURY-FOX

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation is the end result of a business begun back in the nickelodeon days of show business by William Fox. In little more than 35 years, the company has grown to a $150,000,000 corporation, operating a 325-acre studio in Hollywood, producing annually from 26 to 40 features, over 50 short subjects and 104 newsreels.

At the turn of the century, Mr. Fox, then in textiles, entered the arcade and nickelodeon business and became a member of the exhibition firm of Fox, Moss and Brill. His associates were B. S. Moss and Sol Brill. This association led to the establishment by Mr. Fox of a film exchange, the Greater New York Film Rental Company. In 1913 he organized the Box Office Attraction Company, later acquiring the services of Winfield Sheehan, associated with Mr. Fox for many years.

February 1, 1915, the Fox Film Corporation was founded with the intention of combining production, exhibition and distribution under one name. Film exchanges were established in a dozen cities throughout the country. Today the company has 32 domestic branches and offices throughout the world.

In 1917, with the shift of production from the seat to the west coast, Fox Films moved into its Sunset Studio in Hollywood.

When sound same to the industry, in 1926, Fox Film was able to use the pioneering efforts of Theodore Case and Earl I. Sponable, who invented Movietone, a sound-on-film process.

About 1929 there started a series of reorganizations and financial deals and involvements, principal of which was the purchase by Fox Films of control of Loew's, Inc., for approximately $44,000,000. By order of the Government, the Fox Company's ownership of Loew's was later dissolved and various banking interests acquired control of that stock.

During these reorganizations, William Fox's connections with the company were discontinued. Sidney R. Kent joined the company as executive vice-president on April 1, 1932, and two weeks later became the company's president. Mr. Kent continued as president until his death, early in 1942.

In 1935, the Fox Film Corporation was merged with a major producing organization, Twentieth Century Pictures, headed by Joseph M. Schenck, and the company assumed its present corporate name. This merger brought Darryl F. Zanuck into the company as vice-president in charge of production of the merged organizations. Mr. Schenck became chairman of the board and continued in that position until his resignation in June, 1942, when Wendell L. Willkie took over the post.

Following Mr. Kent's death, Spyros P. Skouras, a leading theatre operator, became president.

The company does not operate or directly own any theatres in the U. S. The company has a controlling interest in the Hoyt's group of about 168 theatres in Australia. Twentieth Century-Fox has a substantial interest in Gaumont-British Pictures Corporation, Ltd., owner and operator of some 264 theatres in the British Isles, and also an interest in Amalgamated Theatres, Ltd., comprising 44 theatres in New Zealand. It also has interests in theatres in Egypt, Holland, Colombia, South Africa and Chile.

By decree entered June 7, 1951, 20th Century-Fox separated into a new producing-distributing and a new theatre company on Sept. 27, 1952. The decree provided that National Theatres, formerly a wholly-owned subsidiary, divest itself of 91 theatres and four parcels of real estate not later than June 7, 1953. Additional divestiture is required in the event that, in certain competitive situations, independent competitors do not continue to operate theatres on the runs referred to in the decree or in the event that National, in operating its theatres in certain situations, adopts certain specified operating policies. There are 57 situations with respect to which one or both of these conditions is applicable wherein additional divestiture could be required in the event the conditions stipulated hold true. Where a competing independent exhibitor is not afforded a reasonable opportunity to procure films on particular run, National may be limited in the number of grade of films it can buy for its houses in each of the competitive situations listed in the decree. There are 108 of them. Charles P. Skouras, president of National, anticipates the company will retain approximately 420 theatres when divorcement is completed.

The consolidated net earnings of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and all of its subsidiaries for the year (52 weeks) ended December 27, 1952 amounted to $4,747,587. Included in this amount is $1,491,715 representing the net earnings of domestic theatre subsidiaries for the thirty-nine weeks prior to divorcement, which occurred on September 27, 1952. It also includes a special credit of $1,077,755 arising from a change of accounting procedure at the time of divorcement which resulted in the bringing of foreign operations to the same date as domestic operations. They previously were five weeks behind. The earnings per share amounted to $1.71 on the 2,769,486 shares of common stock outstanding at the close of the year.

The consolidated net earnings for the fifty-two (52) weeks of 1951 were $4,308,431 including $2,180,192 from domestic theatre subsidiaries and amounted to $1.47 a share on the common stock.

World-wide film rentals are given in the following tabulation.

Year	U.S. & Can. (000 Omitted)	Rest of World	Total
1941......	$30,848	$15,646	$46,494

1951......	......	......	97,292
1952......	......	......	99,820

In accordance with the Consent Decree in the Government trust case, the divorcement of the National Theatres from Twentieth Century-Fox became effective Sept. 27, 1952. National Theatres also acquired the Roxy Theatre in New York. (See National Theatres Corp. in Corporation section and Theatre Circuits.)

HISTORY OF UNITED ARTISTS

United Artists Corporation was organized in April of 1919, in sequel to a meeting of Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Chaplin and D. W. Griffith at the home of William G. McAdoo in Santa Barbara. It had grown out of a suggestion to those stars made by Oscar Price, publicity and promotional assistant to Mr. McAdoo when he was Secretary of the Treasury and the stars were helping sell Liberty Loans.

Mr. Price was the first president, soon to resign and withdraw with Mr. McAdoo. Hiram Abrams took over. Later Joseph M. Schenck became the head of the concern, to be succeeded in turn by Al Lichtman, who was followed by the administration of Dr. Atillio H. Giannini and George Schaefer, who was succeeded by Maurice Silverstone, who resigned at mid-year of 1941. Of the founders, the remaining stockholders are Miss Pickford, Charles Chaplin and the Douglas Fairbanks estate. Sir Alexander Korda became a stockholder in 1935; Samuel Goldwyn, retiring from the organization in March of 1941, sold his stock to the company; then in April, 1944, Korda also sold his stock to the corporation, and terminated his American distribution arrangement with it.

In July, 1950, Miss Pickford and Mr. Chaplin each sold 3,600 shares of the 4,000 shares owned by each of them to a syndicate represented by Paul V. McNutt who became chairman of the board.

In February, 1951, a new syndicate acquired management of the company. The group is composed of Arthur B. Krim, former president of Eagle-Lion Classics, Inc.; Robert Benjamin, president of the J. Arthur Rank Organization (America), Inc.; Matthew Fox, former vice-president of Universal-International; William J. Heineman, U.A. vice-president in charge of distribution; Max E. Youngstein, vice-president in charge of world-wide advertising, publicity and exploitation; and Arnold Picker, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution. By showing a profit for 1951—the company's first year "in the black" since 1948—the syndicate, in January, 1952, was enabled to take 10-year management control of United Artists with ownership of 50 percent of the stock and voting control of the remaining 50 percent owned by Miss Pickford and Mr. Chaplin.

HISTORY OF UNIVERSAL

Universal Pictures has a history stemming from the pioneer days of the industry. The company was formed under the title, "Universal" in 1912, when Carl Laemmle amalgamated Bison 101, Nestor, Powers and several other organizations, including his own Imp firm. Carl Laemmle had entered the picture business as an exhibitor, opening the White Front Theatre on Milwaukee Avenue, Chicago, February 24, 1906.

He founded Laemmle Film Service on October 1 of that year, quit the Patents Company in April, 1909, and released his first Independent Motion Picture (Imp) Company "feature", "Hiawatha", length, 988 feet, on October 25, 1909.

In that experimental epoch, Universal launched the star system by hiring Florence Lawrence for $1,000 a week and billing her as "Queen of the Screen." The studio also produced the screen's initial "exposé" film, "Traffic in Souls", first film to be reviewed by the drama critics of the daily press.

Universal acquired a studio at Sunset Boulevard and Gower Street in 1914, and began making pictures in Hollywood. In 1915, production was moved to the present site, Universal City. Here appeared Wallace Reid, Lon Chaney, Mary Pickford, Rudolph Valentino and Boris Karloff, among many others.

"Foolish Wives", "first million-dollar feature", "The Hunchback of Notre Dame", "All Quiet On the Western Front", and screen dramas of like import, were filmed in the decades which followed.

On March 16, 1920, Carl Laemmle and R. H. Cochrane assumed complete control of the company.

On April 2, 1936, Universal passed under new management, with J. Cheever Cowdin as chairman of the board. On January 6, 1938, Nate J. Blumberg became president of the company.

Under the new management Universal embarked upon the policy of developing star values and has been most successful during the time it has operated in the establishment of such names as Deanna Durbin, Abbott & Costello, Maria Montez, Donald O'Connor and others under contract.

During 1946, the company underwent its second transformation. Production-wise, it eliminated the production of all so-called "B" pictures, Westerns and serials, following a merger and acquisition of the assets of International Pictures Corp. of Leo Spitz and William Goetz. Mr. Spitz and Mr. Goetz became the production heads, and Universal-International trademark emerged.

Secondly, Universal completed a distribution deal with the J. Arthur Rank organization for the American distribution of the top British pictures produced by the Rank affiliated companies.

The year 1946 also saw the emergence of United World Pictures, a wholly-owned Universal subsidiary, to handle the production and distribution of non-theatrical films. United World acquired the Bell and Howell Filmsound Library of 6,000 subjects. It then purchased Castle Films, the largest seller of non-theatrical packaged films to the home. The year 1950 saw the resignation of J. Cheever Cowdin with Mr. Blumberg assuming full command. Alfred E. Daff, who had been foreign sales manager, assumed the top post in the foreign distribution setup and then became director of world sales with the resignation of W. A. Scully—a post without parallel in the industry. Mr. Scully will continue until 1954 as domestic sales consultant. Charles J. Feldman was appointed domestic sales manager under Mr. Daff and Americo Aboaf foreign sales head.

In November, 1951 Decca Records acquired approximately 28 per cent of Universal's common stock to make it the largest single stockholder in the company. For this interest Decca paid $3,773,914 for the 234,900 shares involved and the right to purchase 32,500 additional warrants, according to a report made by Milton R. Rackmil, president of Decca, to the Securities and Exchange Commission.

He reported that of these shares, 78,000 were purchased on the New York Stock Exchange, while the balance, most of which formerly was owned by the Paul G. Brown estate, was bought from Gertrude Bergman, Maurice A. Bergman, Lewis Fox Blumberg, N. J. Blumberg, Vera F. Blumberg, Alfred E. Daff, Edith Mayer Goetz, William Goetz, Doris Jean Mayer and Leo Spitz.

The warrants were purchased from N. J. Blumberg and Doris Jean Mayer, at a reported price of $5 each. The purchases on the New York Stock Exchange were made at current market prices; the purchases from the individuals named were made at prices reached as a result of negotiations. Purchase of the holdings of Spitz and Goetz changed their status to that of employes under contract. Both continued in their posts, Spitz as executive head of production and Goetz as executive in charge of production. Their block of about 150,000 shares was acquired at approximately $15 a share. Blumberg's holdings included 15,000 shares and 32,500 warrants. In announcing the purchase, Rackmil declared, "The ownership of these shares will bring about a close association between our two companies. We have kindred interests in the entertainment business. These interests can be developed for our mutual benefit. The transaction indicates the confidence that our respective companies have in the future of the motion picture and allied industries."

In the spring of 1952, Decca Records became the controlling stockholders of Universal. Its interests were acquired partly in the open market and partly through the purchase of all J. Arthur Rank's stock in the company. As a result, Milton R. Rackmil, president of Decca Records, was made a member of the Universal board and subsequently elected president of Universal in July, 1952. N. J. Blumberg, at the same time, was elected chairman of the board.

Consolidated net earnings for the fiscal year ended Nov. 1, 1952, were $2,307,701. This compares with a net of $2,267,784 for the preceding fiscal year, representing an increase in net earnings of $39,917 in 1952 over 1951.

HISTORY OF WARNER BROTHERS

Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., took its origin in the 90-seat Cascade theatre in Newcastle, Pa., early in 1905, an enterprise of Harry M. Warner, who brought his three brothers, Sam, Albert and Jack, presently into motion picture enterprises, including regional distribution and eventually, in 1913, into production with Warners Features. Warner Brothers, the concern of the modern era, was incorporated in 1923, to produce and distribute. The concern acquired its first theatre, at Youngstown, Ohio, in December, 1924. Warners' first important impress on production was with "My Four Years in Germany," based on Ambassador James W. Gerard's book. Their pioneering of sound, in collaboration—and ultimate litigation—with the Telephone Company, is familiar history.

In 1925, Warner acquired Vitagraph, Inc., which operated 34 exchanges in the U. S. and Canada, and also acquired two other concerns with foreign exchanges. It also acquired the name and assorted assets of First National Pictures.

In 1925, Warners set about the acquisition of theatres, getting in that year 13 houses. In December, 1928, it took over the majority stock of the Stanley Company of America, with 182 theatres, and stock in other theatre companies.

In 1947 Pathe News was acquired from RKO, giving Warners a newsreel for the first time. The newsreel, called Warner Pathe News, was issued first, August 13, 1947.

A plan of reorganization, to be effective on or before April 4, 1953, which would split the present Warner company into a new theatre company and a new production-distribution company in compliance with its consent decree, was approved by stockholders by a vote of 5,079,833 shares for and 41,579 shares against at the annual meeting held in Wilmington, Del. on February 20, 1951. The re-organization, reached through a consent decree with the Department of Justice, provides for Warner stockholders to receive one-half share in the new theatre company and the new picture company in exchange for each share now held. Warner had until April 4, 1953, to carry out the plan. The reorganization was consummated February 25, 1953.

In compliance with the reorganization plan, Harry M., Albert and Jack L. Warner sold their Warner Theatre stock interest to Fabian Enterprises, Inc. which now controls the theatre company. The circuit was renamed the Stanley Warner Corporation. (See Stanley Warner under own name this section and under Theatre Circuits).

The new picture company will continue production and its subsidiaries will continue distribution through its domestic and foreign exchanges. In addition to the production, distribution and processing facilities which will be retained by the new picture company, it will own a 37½ per cent interest in Associated British Picture Corp., a 400-theatre circuit in the British Isles; a theatre in London and three theatres in Latin America; and will continue to own the Music Publishers Holding Corp., which owns M. Witmark & Sons, Harms, Inc., and Remick Music Corp., all music publishers, and Edward A. Stege Co. engaged in printing music.

Consolidated net profit for the new picture company for the year ended August 31, 1952, was $7,084,570 which compared with $7,258,328 the previous annual period. This represents a segregation of the earnings of Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., and its subsidiaries from theatre earnings during the respective periods.

Formed January 1, 1950 to assume all theatre properties of former Paramount Pictures company with approximately 1,115 theatres, 550 of which were in partnerships. The divestiture program contemplates total ownership of 651 theatres.

See American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres in Corporations Section for detail of the company's financial status.

A plan to merge American Broadcasting Company and United Paramount Theatres through an exchange of the latter's common and preferred stock for ABC stock was announced on May 23, 1951. The proposed merger was approved by the stockholders of both companies on July 27, 1951 and was approved early in 1953 by the Federal Communications Commission. It contemplated Mr. Goldenson as president and Edward J. Noble, chairman of AB's board, as chairman of the merged companies' finance committee.

For the company's theatre holdings, vested in wholly-owned subsidiaries or partnerships and operating arrangements consult index for the following, or listings thereafter:

Arizona Paramount Corp., Inc., Balaban & Katz, Buffalo Paramount Corp., Florida State Theatres, Intermountain Theatres, Interstate Circuit, Inc., Kansas City Operating Co. The Year in Television

FROM mid-year of 1952, when there were less than 125 television stations in operation, to mid-year 1953, when this edition of the ALMANAC went to press, the television industry, with the FCC wraps off, made tremendous progress, not only in the number of new stations currently operating or licensed by the FCC to start before the end of the year, but also in vastly improved transmission, standards and the development of new closed theatre circuit production companies. There is continued experimentation in the subscription television field and the development of color transmission by both CBS and NBC. In mid-1953 there were some 450 authorized stations.

NBC had five owned and operated units in New York, Washington, Hollywood, Chicago and Cleveland, plus, as of July 1, 1953, 133 affiliated stations in 121 markets. CBS had three O & O TV stations in New York, Chicago and Hollywood plus 125 affiliated outlets in 109 markets. ABC owned & operated TV stations numbered five located in New York, San Francisco, Hollywood, Detroit and Chicago and had 135 affiliates in 101 markets. DuMont had three O & O TV stations located in New York, Washington and Pittsburgh and the Mutual Broadcasting System's O & O TV outlets are located in New York, Boston and Hollywood.

Most important development during the 12 months was the fact that despite the approval, after a lengthy battle, by the FCC of the CBS color system, NBC continued to make rapid progress with its compatible color experiments. CBS announced plans to start regular color programs transmission to its affiliates approximately September 25 and Columbia executives estimated that by February, 1954, about one-seventh of the country's population, or 24 million people, owning sets with color adapters, would view color programs regularly.

Another important development in the TV picture was the change in the attitude of motion picture interests toward the TV medium. The potential of television was used to seek to "bring back to the theatre box office former theatre-goers and new ones." Thus major and independent film companies embarked on TV spot campaign with such marked success that early this year, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer made a special tieup with Ed Sullivan in which that studio's stars appeared on "Toast of the Town" in scenes from MGM films.

The increasing importance of motion picture films in the field of television was marked, considering that during the first six months of 1953 almost 18% of all NBC network programming consisted of filmed programs; CBS utilized film programs on about 14% of its network programming while ABC, marking time pending the approval of its merger with United Paramount Theatres relied on Hollywood film product for almost half of its regular TV schedule. With Hollywood stars, after years on radio, agreeing almost en masse to appearing on film TV programs, it is quite likely that the percentage of film programs in ratio to "live" TV shows will increase in the next 12 months.

The first closed theatre circuit TV company, Theatre Network Television (TNT) produced several championship prize-fights and a full-length operatic performance and in June, 1953, was greeted with its first rival in the newly-organized Box Office Attractions, headed by a group of TV personalities including Milton Mound, attorney for several prominent show folk, as president, and Sid Caesar, "Your Show of Shows" comedian, and Abram Chasins, Station WQXR musical director, vice-presidents. It had already made a five-year deal to televise exclusively (closed theatre circuit) the Notre Dame football games and the Harlem Globetrotters basketball team.

Outstanding Television events of the year (July, 1952 to July, 1953) chronologically:

Republican and Democratic Conventions of 1952 at Chicago in July.

Lifting of the FCC Freeze, July 11, 1952.

Inauguration of President Dwight D. Eisenhower, Jan. 4, 1953.

Rocky Marciano-Jersey Joe Walcott championship fight (May 15, 1953), which ended in a one-round knockout and which cost the sponsor, Gillette Safety Razor Co. $300,000 for a ten-second commercial.

Coronation of Queen Elizabeth II, June 2, 1953.

Ford 50th Anniversary Program via NBC and CBS simultaneously June 15, 1953.

President Eisenhower's speech to the American people on the Korean truce signing, July 26, 1953. —PINKY HERMAN.

FILMS AND TV HIT IT OFF

by CHRIS J. WITTING

Managing Director, DuMont Television Network

THE year 1953 easily could go down in the history of mass entertainment as the year the movies and television really hit it off.

First, the thawing of the Federal Communications Commission freeze inescapably revealed the promise of the great TV market for Hollywood.

Second, the video manufacturers developed the finest electronic devices for putting a Hollywood product on a living room screen, clear and sharp.

There never has been any question about the public acceptance of motion pictures on TV.

Even the old ones had a nostalgic quality, and the rapid growth of television, plus the varying viewer-habits of audiences even permitted these "oldies" to be circulated two, three and even four times.

In fact, at one point, recently, the demand was so great that TV stations began to run out of supply—had to stop certain feature motion picture programs.

At the same time, Hollywood was preoccupied with the technological ramifications of an entirely new approach to marketing its product in dimensions.

The situation had all the earmarks of the familiar editorial cartoon where the two horses are pulling the same load in opposite directions . . . Hollywood had a tremendous, non-dimensional stockpile—and TV needed it.

The daily press and the trade papers called it a "production sag" and pointed to static conditions in the film capital.

Then, just about at mid-year, every publication surveying the scene saw the light of day on the horizon.

There were enthusiastic headlines saying that "$30,000,000 are being poured into the making of forty-eight series of television movies" and, significantly, "a notable aspect of the situation is that thirty-two of the programs already have sponsors to foot their production bills."

Thirty million dollars is a lot of money, but 48 series of television movies represented a mere drop in the bucket compared to the demand in the TV market.

However, it was a good beginning and gave all evidence that there might be a second historic gold strike in California.

Television met the situation more than half way . . . it went all the way to California with the National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters convention to show that the Hollywood product—old features as well as new—films especially produced for TV, and teletranscriptions or kinescopes alike, could be given a new quality.

DuMont researchers proudly demonstrated two new devices—the Video Recorder and the Multi-scanner—as contributions to reproduction of the product of Hollywood in all the cinema capital's world-famous tradition for perfection.

The television industry reaction was enthusiastic—not in terms of handclapping so much as in the important area of sales orders for this new electronic equipment.

This reaction itself was an expression of the confidence that now, at last, TV and Hollywood had come to a meeting of the ways.

We at DuMont feel that we have much to hope for—that television and the movies have much to gain by a closer rapport.

Next year should be the beginning of a new era for everybody.

A MUTUALITY OF INTEREST

by WILLIAM H. FINESHRIBER, JR.

Vice-President and General Manager of Networks, NBC

THE broadcasting industry shares a mutuality of interest with the motion picture trade: both offer entertainment and information and both are dedicated to serving the American people.

Three primary trends will be at work during the coming months to aid broadcasting in fulfilling its mandate for public service. These developments include:

1. Expansion of service for the television audience and for television advertisers;
2. Introduction of color television broadcasting;
3. Continuation of the renaissance of radio.

Television has come through its "shakedown cruise" of the past five years. The medium has produced its special art forms and has developed effective techniques of its own for presenting educational, entertainment and commercial messages. And the public has been equally excited and delighted by TV's entertainment factors and the front-row seat it provides at a Coronation, a Presidential campaign or a World Series.

During the past year, television enjoyed almost a complete sellout at night and in the late afternoon. The prospect is for a similar success story in the coming year, with major programming and promotional effort now going also to the morning time period.

Ultimately, daytime programming will assume the same cardinal importance in TV that it now does in radio. But it will take vision, enterprise and experimentation to create shows for the special needs of the between-chores homemaker. NBC broke the trail in 1952 with "Today." Typical of the new shows of radical format that will be coming along in the daytime is "Home," a women's service show which NBC plans to present during the 1953-54 season in the noon time slot.

Better programs mean bigger audiences. With more than 25,000,000 television sets already in use, television's circulation is indeed massive. Its salespower is unmatched and its cost per thousand is already a great, economical buy. Multiple sponsorship is the key to both the need for still greater artistry in programming and for making available effective television for every type of advertising budget.

Recognition of the importance of film in television operations is underscored by NBC's recent action in setting up a separate film division. NBC's policy with respect to the use of film has not undergone any change: we use film where film is better than a "live" presentation; its advantages in certain areas need no reiteration here. Film has played a significant role in the growth of television, and it will continue as an integral part of TV programming.

Inauguration of regular color television broadcasting will add new excitement and vastly increase the medium's impact. And because it will be fully compatible color television, color programming can be launched without any loss in the existing black-and-white television audience.

If television has glamor, then color television will increase its glamor manyfold. And its power will further increase TV broadcasting's share of the national advertising budget, bringing to the medium scores of new industries whose sales message is dependent on color.

Although prematurely buried by some as long ago as 1950, radio displays new and continuing opportunities for alert advertisers. There are now 45,000,000 radio families in America. There are 26,000,000 car radios and millions of portable sets. In 1952 alone, 5,000,000 new radio sets were purchased.

The value of television, radio and motion pictures depends not on their ability to undermine each other, but on their ingenuity in making the most of their individual appeals to the American public.

The opportunity for service is limitless. The challenge is great. Broadcasting and motion pictures can and will continue to meet this challenge, at times together and at others in their separate ways.

YEAR-ROUND SALES TOOL

by J. L. VAN VOLKENBURG

President, CBS Television

IT used to be normal in broadcasting to skip over the Summer and look ahead to the Fall season. But television has changed that. After only six years, it has established itself as a year-round sale tool—the least seasonal of ALL advertising media.

The Summer of 1953, for example, showed television with audiences as large as during any previous Fall-Winter season, and with approximately the same number of sponsored hours.

And next Fall will be the biggest season in television history—both in circulation and advertising.

Television has already gone more than half way in covering all American homes. And next Fall, it will have spread to three of every five: a total of 26,000,000 homes. It will penetrate areas with three-fifths of the country's population.

How much will people continue to watch television? This was answered by the discovery that the longer they have owned a set, the longer they keep it on. It's conservative to estimate that the average television family will be watching more than five hours a day during the last quarter of 1953—almost a fourth of the 24-hour day. Set owners will continue to give more time to television than to all other media combined—as they have given it already for more than a year.

For advertisers, gains in coverage and viewing have combined to produce still greater sales results—giving still greater scope for television's impact. With more and more advertisers clocking its "track record," there's ample evidence that television is far out in front as a mover of merchandise. And as time goes on, the sharpening of techniques for selling with sound, sight and motion can only create greater efficiency than ever.

One expression of this is the steady decline in television's cost per thousand.

So there's no sign that television is anywhere near reaching its full potential in any area you look at. In fact, within television today a whole new medium is just gathering momentum: daytime television. It has developed so fact that the top five daytime television shows now win an average audience of more than three and a half million.

In daytime viewing, there is a new measure of television's strength. For it shows that television can outrival other forms of entertainment, not only in the evening but during the day . . . that it can induce housewives to reschedule their work to be able to see their favorite daytime programs.

Daytime television today has the opportunities that were open in nighttime television in 1949. It's an area in which CBS Television is proud to be leading—with close to three times as many sponsored hours as the second network. For it rounds out the over-all leadership of CBS Television that embraces most of the Top Ten programs . . . greatest average program popularity, and—the latest and culminating development—first place in monthly billings.

It's hard to recall when a medium approached a Summer or a Fall with stronger appeal for both audiences and advertisers—or when a network made such a strong showing in its industry.

TV PATTERN ESTABLISHED

by ALEXANDER STRONACH, JR.

Vice-President for the ABC-TV Network

HITTING its stride as the most potent of communications media, television during the past year registered wide advances in almost all its phases and established at least the outline of the pattern within which it may be expected to operate for some years to come.

For our own network, the past year was one of signal significance highlighted by the FCC-approved merger of the American Broadcasting Company with United Paramount Theatres, Inc., in February, 1953, and the subsequent formation of American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, Inc. Through the additional assets which accrued, our network immediately embarked upon a broad program of acquisition, creation and expansion of television programs as well as the addition of outstanding talent. Since the merger, we have signed exclusive contracts for the services of many top-flight enterainers.

In the field of programming, we have signed a long-term agreement with Hal Roach, Jr., for the production of a special series of television films; have revamped our program schedule; acquired new programs and changed and improved several which have been ABC-TV attractions of long standing; particularly, we have concentrated on the creation of new programs.

Outstanding was the production and presentation of the "ABC Album" in which we presented each week a complete drama constituting a base and "sampler" for a full-time, extended television series and which won such instant popularity that it attracted the sponsorship of the Plymouth Division of the Chrysler Corporation, under whose aegis it appeared as the "Plymouth Playhouse."

For the industry as a whole, the year was one of great importance, marked by the lifting of the FCC "freeze" on new station construction; the increase in the production of film exclusively for television and a consequent expanding of syndication in the sales field; and the constant attempts to find a practical solution to the problem of constantly rising costs. This latter is still with us and will undoubtedly continue to be one of the major preoccupations of the industry during the coming year. Various solutions have been put forward—alternating sponsorship—cooperative and participating sponsorship—live and film integration, etc.

It seems to me that the stepped up production of television films will continue during the coming year, both for regular series and on pilot models. I do not believe, however, that this increased Hollywood production will operate adversely on live TV production. While film has proved itself in the field there is a freshness, immediacy and companionship between the viewer and the live production, the importance of which cannot be minimized.

I think the coming year will see greater emphasis on writing, adaptation and production activities in all phases of TV. For our own network in particular—armed with sparkling and fresh programs and utilizing the great talent we have and will continue to acquire—and for the industry in general I foresee a television year that will be richly rewarding both to the public and the medium.

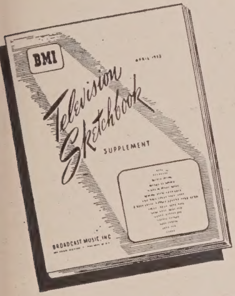
TELEVISION PROGRAM AIDS

BMI services are designed as practical aids to the television broadcaster. Check with your program director or music librarian for this material.

TELEVISION SKETCHBOOK



BMI
APRIL 1952
Television Sketchbook
SUPPLEMENT
BROADCAST MUSIC, INC.

A regular monthly service containing timely and practical working scripts for the presentation of songs in dramatic, comic and pictorial fashion.

The very latest song hits as well as the standard favorites are developed into photogenic sketches which can be used effectively as complete musical shows, as production numbers in variety shows, or for scene-setting segments.

There are dozens of ways in which you can adapt the Sketchbook to advantage.

RECORDED BRIDGES MOODS INTERLUDES

BMI
Bridges
Moods
Interludes
BROADCAST MUSIC, INC.

A classified and cross-indexed reference book, particularly helpful wherever descriptive mood music or background music is necessary.

You don't have to be a music expert to make the most of this BMI service.

"Recorded Bridges, Moods, Interludes" gives you thousands of cues to recorded symphonic music which is available to any telecaster.

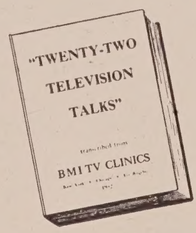
CATEGORICAL INDEX

BMI
CATEGORICAL INDEX
BROADCAST MUSIC, INC.

For setting musical scenes and selecting appropriate music for countless script situations.

A complete volume, carefully compiled, indexed and cross-indexed, to provide immediate reference to a wide variety of popular and standard song titles.

"22 TELEVISION TALKS"



"TWENTY-TWO TELEVISION TALKS"
transcribed from
BMI TV CLINICS

An important book containing transcripts of the talks and discussions at the BMI Television Clinics.

A practical symposium of TV data by men of wide experience and recognized pioneers in television.

Offered to TV, radio and allied industries at the cost of transcribing and printing.

Your BMI Field Representative, who visits your station periodically, can be helpful in many ways. For any personal problem in selecting or programming music send your inquiry to BMI's Station Service Department.

TV Channel Allocations

On April 13, 1952, the Federal Communications Commission announced lifting of the "freeze" on new television station construction which had been in effect since September 30, 1948. In so doing, it also made public the allocation of the new ultra-high frequency channels and some changes in the existing very-high frequency bands. Theoretically, allocation of the ultra-high frequency channels makes possible 2,053 new stations in 1,291 communities. This includes 242 exclusive educational outlets and is in addition to the 108 TV stations then on the air. Following is the complete list of cities and the channels assigned to each. The population of each community is given in parentheses. The asterisk (*) preceding a channel number indicates a frequency reserved for educational use.
